

SUNNY'S DILEMMA

You are an unnamed TA attending Professor Rizk's meeting. She always catches you getting distracted so she decides to make you write a program for her to sort out your thoughts whenever she catches you on your phone. You may have a short attention span but you are a clever TA. Your students are free labor. You will get them to write their program for you or you will fail them and Professor Rizk will never ever find out.

```
Professor Rizk is so cool -> Huh? What did Professor Rizk say?
-> Say something she is getting mad -> Neck on froze (huh huh)
-> Cool A/C air blowing down my neck
```

This is your train of thought. They are linked together. Normally, the last sentence of one thought should be the first sentence of the next consecutive thought. However, these thoughts are scrambled up. This is what it looks like when you sort out your thoughts.

```
Professor Rizk is so cool -> Cool A/C air blowing down my neck
-> Neck on froze (huh huh) -> Huh? What did Profesoor Rizk say?
-> Say something she is getting mad

During lab, you will give your students a text files containing your thoughts and they will output your thoughts in a connected, sorted order.
